

DR HILARY LINDSAY – JUNIOR WARDEN

Hilary joined the livery in 2004 and has been a Court Assistant since 2014. In 2016-17 she was President of the Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales (ICAEW); the first academic and second woman to hold that position in ICAEW's 137 year history. She was also chair of the CCAB, the combined group of the main UK accountancy bodies. In 2011-12 she had been President of AAT (the Association of Accounting Technicians). She began her career as a partner in an accounting practice in Lancashire before moving on mid-career to a senior role as a Director with ICAEW and then into academia.

Hilary is passionate about personal development and in 2013 completed doctoral research with The Open University into the role of continuing professional development in the accountancy profession. She has since published academic articles and the book Adaptability: the secret to lifelong learning and is actively promoting her 'complete professional' learning framework. Previously an award-winning lecturer for the Open University Business School, Hilary is now a researcher and supervisor on the OU Doctorate in Education programme. Earlier in her career she received the Junior Chamber International Award for the most outstanding member in the world.

Recently Hilary completed a ten year term as a trustee and then Patron of CABA, the wellbeing charity for ICAEW members, and for over a decade has held various roles on the boards of housing associations. She lives in Northampton with her husband Colin. They have both been involved with Northampton Samaritans for over twenty years. Other joint interests include walking, their allotment and their livery companies (he is a Needlemaker and an Information Technologist). Hilary has previously run several marathons to raise funds for Northampton Samaritans and recently she and Colin completed Wainwright's 200 mile Coast to Coast walk across the north of England.
